Charles & Julie Champlin – Crossworld – Brazil

These last several weeks have not been easy. Trudging to the hospital day after day for Charles' mom Irene was physically and emotionally draining. Now that she is home, the work load is that much greater. What we are involved in is definitely a different kind of giving. This is day in and day out supplying the needs of another patiently and with a right attitude. On the days when she has been stronger, I began asking about her life. Notebook in hand, I've been recording her memories and little by little, I am writing her story. There are the lingering questions, "How long? Is she going to rally or work at the physical therapy? Will her heart give out? Should we start interviewing potential round-the-clock caregivers? When will we be able to go home?" I don't know the answer to these questions. Right now, God is asking us to give sacrificially. May God help us learn the lessons He has for us in the sick room and equip us to faithfully give of ourselves.

We are immensely grateful for your prayers and encouragement over these weeks. We really don't know how to plan at this point, and are depending on the Lord to guide. The word is that mandatory shutdowns are coming again this next week, as the second wave of COVID sweeps the country. That being said, travel would be more dangerous and more expensive with fewer flights available, especially before Christmas. So, at this point, we are staying put here in Guaratingueta for now and continuing to use Whatsapp to encourage Wai Wai believers and those we had been discipling in Boa Vista. We were able to find a small turkey at a grocery store up the street, and I cooked several small pumpkins so that I can get pie made tomorrow. Thanksgiving is not a Brazilian holiday, but that doesn't mean that we can't celebrate on our own. And we have been trying to give Irene something to look forward to as well.

Many of you are probably in similar situations—far away from family, or unable to meet together because of local health department restrictions or concerns in regard to COVID. Despite the situation, we have so very much to rejoice in!

This passage in 1 Peter 1:3-7 was such a blessing to me today. How important to keep in perspective that these difficulties are just temporary and God uses them to purify our faith. As you prepare for Thanksgiving and the holidays ahead, we trust that you will find much with which to praise God for, including the inconveniences, the difficulties and trials.

Thanks for your prayers and your encouragement on this journey.
Happy Thanksgiving!

Secure in Him,

Charles and Julie Champlin
